The Campaign for Grade-Level Reading (CGLR) has confirmed the dates for GLR Week 2024 — July 22–26. We would like to invite you to save the date!

During GLR Week 2024, CGLR's network of state lead organizations will host virtual and in-person events that spotlight how dozens of states and communities are working to advance early school success and accelerate equitable learning recovery to focus on gaps. In addition, GLR Week 2024 will feature daily plenary sessions as well as a series of online learning opportunities for local funders, coalition-leading organizations and program partners. This year we are excited to confirm a session with Khan Academy to hear from Sal Khan about possibilities related to AI and the need to ensure that children in economically challenged families have early and full access to its benefits. We will also have a special session with Hedy Chang of Attendance Works on a nationwide crisis that is impeding efforts to accelerate equitable learning recovery.
